

SLS Shoot and They Score Raising a Massive £628 for Macmillan Cancer Support!

Following a two day training meeting, SLS and Scilabware had a fantastic idea; they would have a charity football match to raise money for Macmillan Cancer Support.

The match took place on the 16th July at Dayncourt Sports College and raised £628 between the spectators, players and employees from both companies. SLS (playing in white) took an early lead and won, scoring a whopping 9 goals. Josh Chapman and Oliver Whaley made a spectacular strike partnership and scored 6 between them.

Josh Chapman, Territory Sales Manager for Sheffield at SLS says "It was a great match, they put up a great defence but in the end we just had enough in attack to provide the difference – all competitiveness aside though, the match really demonstrated the close partnership SLS and Scilabware have developed over the years"

The companies battled it out in the pouring rain, with both teams in great spirits. 30 players took part in the match all ranging between the ages of 10 and 50 plus. The final score was a friendly 9-4 to SLS and reflected some great play from Sales Directors, CEOs, Warehouse staff and Customer Services Personnel.

Following the match, both teams retired to the pub to discuss tactics and it was only a matter of time before talk of a rematch was started!

Andy Davies, Marketing Manager from Scilabware says "SLS may have won, but we've got some tricks up our sleeves for next time!"

Watch this space to see if Scilabware take the Macmillan Cup next year!...